

Greek Myths - Ask Questions

Good readers know how to ask questions. If a reader can ask a really insightful and thought-provoking question, it does two things: 1) it proves that they have a really in-depth understanding of the story, and 2) it creates space for really thought-provoking dialogue. For each story, write down two questions – make them as open-ended, insightful, and as thoughtful as possible.

Name: _____

The Beginning of Everything	The Olympian Family: Hera
The War of the Titans	The Olympian Family: Ares
Prometheus and Epimetheus:	The Olympian Family: Aphrodite
The Olympian Family: Zeus	The Olympian Family: Hermes
The Olympian Family: Poseidon	The Olympian Family: Hades
The Olympian Family: Demeter	The Olympian Family: Hestia

The Olympian Family: Dionysus

The Olympian Family: Hephaestus

The Olympian Family: Apollo

The Olympian Family: Artemis

The Story of Daphne

The Story of Arachne

The Story of King Midas

The Story of Echo and Narcissus

The Story of Daedalus and Icarus

The Story of the Sirens

The Story of Medusa

The Story of King Sisyphus